SALT LAKERS IN GOTHAM.

Nov. 26.-The few days that Elders George Albert

Smith and B. H. Roberts spent among the Utah coleny in New York were full of pleasure to the people here. The afternoon lecture by Elder Roberts and the evening sermon by Apos-tle Smith were listened to with rapt interest by the many assembled in Hawthorne hall. On Meneay evening at the "Sunrise" club, where the gen-tlemen were invited to speak, the greatest attention was given to their remarks. Elder Roberts evoking storms of applause by his eloquence and ready answers that met every question advanced by the different process it was a signal triumph three children will appear in Yonkers next week. After that they appear in the northern part of the state for an

Last Tuesday Mrs. Oscar Kirkham and her baby arrived in the city, and are preparing to move into an apartment which they have taken for the winter at the corner of Amsterdam avenue and One Hundred and Twenty. third street. Mr. Kirkham has been engaged to do some concert work in Mt. Vernon, a musical little place a few miles from the city.

Miss Ellis Shipp who is doing some fine work this year in Teachers' col-lege, has lately been elected a mem-ber of the executive staff of the gradu-ating club, and is feeling quite jubilant over the appointment.

Management (1997)

CARUSO IN THE TOILS.

This is a recent picture of Enrico Caruso, the world's greatest tenor, who was recently fined $10 for annoying women in the Central Park Zoo, New York city. His arrest assumed the pro portions of an international sensation. From Flushing, Long Island, Wednesday, the 21st, all that was mortal of the once brilliant actress, Georgia Cayvan, was conveyed by relatives and friends to her old home in Boston. Mass., there to be laid beside a loved sister, who had preceded her by a few years, in the old family burying plot, just outside the city she had always cherished in her heart as home. New York claimed her for several years as a resident, but Boston was her home in reality. First as a public reader was she known, being a graduate of the Lewis B. Monroe school of oratory. Steele Mackaye, the author and manager, became impressed with her abilities as a reader, and made flattering the two Utah representatives, Prof. Hickman of the Brigham Young University at Provo and President Mc-Quarrie must not be overlooked in the praise awarded. The former in anpraise awarded. The former in answer to remarks on the authenticity of the Book of Mormon, rose to the occasion in a most telling manner; he gave facts in such a forceful way that even the most indifferent could not but be convinced. Altogether it was an evening of decided progress for the an evening of decided progress for the cause of the missionaries and will certainly bear its good fruit. Mrs. Marion C. Weed of Washington, D. C., the New York Tribune correspondent, was a visitor to the afternoon services, and in an article in Monday's paper paid rare tribute to Elders Roberts' eloquence, declaring that "he spoke eloquence, declaring that "he spoke with the eloquence and earnestness of a Campbell Morgan," and that he was in fact "the most eloquent speaker she ever heard;" she said, "he comes with a message to a waiting world." To the men and women of the congregation, she also gave unstinted to be a few their recedulary and court. congregation, she also gave unstitted praise for their good looks and courtous manner, scouting the idea that they were an ignorant class of people. The singing also came in for a share of praise. R. C. Easton, who sang "The Guiding Star," by Dewey Richards, she wrote, could make his fortune in grand opera if he cared to. Oscar Kirkham and Ellen Thomas were the morning and evening singers, and they received many congratulations for their work. The conference was a day and evening of solid pleasure to the Utah residents of New York, and it is certain no city the traveling elders have visited has been more thoroughly appreciative than were the Gothamites last Sunday at Hawthorne Gothamites last Sunday at Hawthorne

Hon, A. W. McCune is still at the Waldorf; his daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Green, and their children, are at the Walcott, Thirty-fifth and Fifth avenue.

Junius F. Wells came down from South Royalton, Vt., by way of Boston last Wednesday, remaining two days at the Park avenue hotel, attending to business before going home. He has now finished his labors in Vermont, now finished his labors in Vermont, and is speeding home to partake of Thanksgiving turkey with his family. It is now a year and a half since Elder Wells left for the granite state to begin his labors on the Prophet Joseph Fmith's monument. That he has satisfactority completed his labors and that they have been approach by the history and the satisfactority completed his labors and that they have been approved by the authorities at home is well known. It is with regret that his friends in the east paw him depart, and the wish is given that he will always remember them as fondly as they cherish their brief acquaintance with him.

The popular magazine, Success, has two illustrations by Clyde Squires, "Cheering the Doctor's Wife," a story of interest to its readers—and made more so by the plotures illustrating some of its best scened.

Lisle Leigh is meeting with great success in her playlet "Kid Glove Nan," everywhere in Maine and Connecticut and a city engagement is hoped for by her New York friends.

Elder Charles Allen came down from Boston to attend the conference in New York. He left Thursday for Boston and Lynn on his way home, having been honorably released from his missionary labors.

Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Anderson, for-mer residents of Ogden, but now en-gaged in vaudeville business with their children, were visitors to chapel ser-vices Sunday. Mr. Anderson and his

you suffer from Poor Appetite. Sour Risings, Dyspepsia, Indigestion.

ager, became impressed with her abilities as a reader, and made flattering offers to her to accept the dramatic stage as a profession; but a fear of failure held her back, and she continued to give public readings a few years longer. But in 1879 she was induced to accept the part of Hebe in "H. M. S. Pinafore," with the Boston Ideals, in the Boston theater. Steele Mackaye renewed his offer to her to become a member of his Madison Square company. Delly Dutton in "Hazel Kirke" was her first venture under his management, afterwards being promoted to the title part. Miss Cayvan came under the management of A. M. Palmer, J. H. Haverly, and several minor stock managers, until 1887, when Daniel Frohman engaged her as leading woman of the Lyceum Theater Co. From that time the name of Georgia Cayvan became a household word for all that was womanly and dignified on the dramatic stage. Her career, though not phenomenal, was of the more enduring kind and to this day the characters she portrayed in that model stock company have never beeen equaled in the opinions of the best New York critics. For nearly seven years has she lain on her bed of suffering; the loss of eye-sight, caused it is thought, from an operation she was obliged to undergo in 1895, occurred soon after her commitment to the sanitarium; the last three years of her life were a total blank, her mind giving way under the mental occurred soon after her commitment to the sanitarium; the last three years of her life were a total blank, her mind giving way under the mental strain of lil health and blindness. The end came peacefully. She fell asleep never to awaken, being constanty watched by a younger sister. Professionally, Miss Cayvan has always been greatly loved, her memory is cherished by managers and brother artists. Socially she was an immense favorite. Every paper in the city has contributed some loving words for the unhappy end of so beautiful a character. Her friends are many and she is not forgotten for the artistle work she gave the public years ago, even in this lightning age of manufactured stars who burst into view during a night and continue to sparkle for a brief season; her labors were of the slow but sure nature, but she penetrated the heart, there to find an abidtrated the heart, there to find an abid-ing place forever. Sweet rest to

Have you read "UNDER THE TREES AND ELSEWHERE"? We have all of Hamilton Wright Mable's books, and for dainty bits of nature studies they are just the thing. They are surely little gilmpses into the higher life. Each $1.25.

DESERET NEWS BOOK STORE.

ALFONSO'S WALKING STICK. The shrine of the Virgin of El Pilar at Saragossa, Spain, is one of the richest sanctuaries in the world. It has received costly gifts from its devotees of many generations, and its most recent acquisition is a jeweled walking stick presented by King Alfonso. The handle is of fine gold, set with rubies and diamonds. Queen Victoria of Spain is reputed to have a special Try it today. veneration for this hallowed spot.

Georgia Cayvan. MABIE'S BOOKS. JANET.

HANKSGIVING is over. Temptations beckon us. Christmas is near. "What can I get for So-an-So?" is the cry upon everybody's lips. And, if something cannot be had for somebody one way, why, to be sure, there are other ways. Take for instance, the story of the gloves and the woman tempted:

It was dusk. The electric lights winked and danced through the falling feathery snow like the eyes of Santa Claus. The store was crowded. People stood five deep at every counter.

"I must now go to the glove coun-"I must how go to the glove counter," said the woman tempted, to her friend. "Elizabeth must have some long white gloves for Christmas, to match her evening gown. Just look at those beauties lying there!"

The snow was failing in feathery takes. Santa Claus seemed to be flakes. Santa Claus seemed to be winking his eye as much as to say: "Christmas comes but once a year;

"Christmas comes but once a year; now's the time."

"Look at the beautiful snow," said the woman tempted to her friend, just as the long white gloves whisked from the counter into her bag.

"Did you see that?" said one of the vigilant clerks.

"Hush!" said the other vigilant clerk. "We can say nothing, now; we'll tell Mr. S. later."

A few days later, the woman tempted entered the store, again, and paused at the glove counter.

ed entered the store, again, and paused at the glove counter.

"I wish to exchange these gloves for a size smaller," she said.

"Where's your check?" asked the vigilant clerk. The woman tempted fumbled about in her bag.

"Well, that is funny! I was certain it was in my bag. I've carried so many things in it lately,"—the clerk did not contradict her—"that I must have dragged it out with other things."

The other clerk had made off to speak to Mr. S.

"The woman who took the gloves has returned to exchange them for a smaller size," he said breathlessly. Mr. S. flew down the alsie at top speed, coming to an abrust half as he ver-

s. Hew down the alsie at top speed, coming to an abrupt halt as he perceived the woman tempfed, "Exchange the gloves," he whispered to the clerk behind him, "and keep quiet; that is one of our best customers, and we can't afford to lose her trade."

"To cover a vice, however small, for the sake of larger gains, stakes the heart!"

The cafes are apt to be crowded on Saturday evenings just before Christ-mas. It's so handy and saves so much Saturday evenings just before Christmas. It's so handy and saves so much time, while out doing Christmas shopping to drop in for a quick hot meal; and gives one a chance to think over and talk over and handle over gifts for our dear ones and friends.

"It is so hard to find exactly what one wants in this town." The speaker looked meak enough, as she languidly drew off her gloves.

"Yes, isn't it?" sighed her companion as she scanned the menu card—and other things.

"What dear little pink shades," said the meek looking one following the

the meek looking one following the other's glance.

on a tree."
"I can make them, you know."
"Can you?"
"Oh, yes, but one can't find anything to trim them with in this town," toying innocently with the fringe,
"What dear little black draggony things all over them—just pasted on, to."

"You don't say; here comes our tray at last."

heard this light chatter, had been amused, but had thought nothing of it, till one of the waitresses exclaimed to another over the mysterious removal of the fringe from "the dear little pink shades."

It is so crowded everywhere weeks before Christmas, who can keep faces in memory from one day to another? The bystander, or bysitter was in the cafe again, a few evenings later, and arrived just in time to hear the rest of the story of the pink shades.

"They are no use whatever, now," said the same waitress,
The by-sitter looked in the direction of the poor fringeless shades, and lot the "dear little black draggony things" had taken wings and flown, in quest had taken wings and flown, in quest of the fringe, no doubt. "Christmas comes but once a year.

and then we shall have money," but if we don't, why, no matter, the "open hand scatters its bounty o'er sea and land," just the same; in other words, the light hand.

"My Johnny is so fond of St. Nichas. You keep it here?"
"Oh, yes; here it is," answered the

"To be sure; I must be blind. Why! you've just stacks of them. Just you be waiting on your other customers, while I look over this number."

The mother of Johnny wore a nice roomy cape. While she scanned another Christmas magazine, she just slipped St. Nicholas under her arm, against the time of the clerk's return. against the time of the clerk's return. By and by, this went under her arm, too,' while she scanned a few more numbers, all of which disappeared under the same loving arm. She looked about for the clerk for the sake of on-lookers, but the store was crowded, and she probably hadn't time to wait, and so quietly slipped out to lose herself in the throng of the street. May Johnny enjoy his St. Nicholas, but may be never know how he came by it!

"Heap on more wood, the wind is chill; But let it whistie as it will, We'll keep our Christmas merry still."

There are other ways of providing There are other ways of providing gifts for our dear ones and friends, without money. None need be slighted. Just dive down to the bottom of your trunk, and come up with last year's gifts, that you didn't happen to need, and had no use for anyway. They only clutter your house and worry you, until you find yourself mentally shaking hands with the woman who wrote "The Tyranny of Things," and who said if she saw another bit of baby ribbon or tissue paper she would scream. would scream.

"There's that little book that Cousin "There's that little book that Cousin Kate gave me last year; I've two copies already; I'm going to give that to Aunt Georgia; she'll never know; there's no writing on it."

This certain young woman is getting ff easy; at least so she congratulates erself. She was sitting on her trunk merrily chatting to one who was sup-posed not to tell.

merrily chatting to one who was supposed not to tell.

"Yes, isn't it?" sighed her combanion as she scanned the menu cardiand other things.

"What dear little pink shades," said the meek looking one following the other's glance.

"Aren't they too dear?"

"How sweet they'd look with pink andles."

"Such pretty gifts, too; and so showy on a tree."

"I can make them, you know."

"Can you?"

"Oh, yes, but one can't find anything to trim them with in this town," toying innocently with the fringe, "What dear little black draggony things all over them—just pasted on, to."

"You don't say; here comes our tray at last."

One at another table had over—

"Italy BABBIE.

FAMOUS VIOLINIST SPURNS MOTHER.

The musical world has been shocked by the startling reveiations regarding Alexander Petschnikoff, the famous violinist, who is charged by his relatives in this country with having spurned and abandoned his mother who, according to her own admission, peddled wood in the streets of Moscow in order to obtain money to develop her son's musical genius. Mrs. Petschnikoff is living at the home of one of her married daughters in New York, in which city the day of the street of the her son is engaged to soon begin an Am erican tour. Petschnikoff, who is now in Russia, has for years, it is alleged, refused to answer letters sent to him by his mother, leaving the writing of replies to his, wife, who is a wealthy Chi-cago woman.

HEATERS AT

Garland and Peninsular Heater, High Grade

$20.00 Heaters at $16.00

$25 00 Heaters at $20.00 $27.50 Heaters at $22.00 $30.00 Heaters at $24.00

$40.00 Heaters at $32.00

EVERY HEATER WARRANTED

Monarch Hardware

22-29 WEST THIRD SOUTH STREET.

CARTHAGE AS IT WAS AT ITS BEST.

A French antiquarian. M. Aucler, has recently completed a model of the ancient city of Carthage as it was in A French antiquarian. M. Aucier, has recently compensation and lake of Carthage. The large round structure its prime in the background of the cut are seen the mountain and lake of Carthage. The large round structure its prime in the background of the cut are seen which was the residence of the admiral of the fleet. At the but tom right hand corner is seen the wall around the Byrsa, the acropolis of Carthage

Christmas Jewelry

Send for Our Illustrated

Catalogue

Send for Our Illustrated

Catalogue

We are ready to serve everybody's jewelry wants. Those who think they must either go without or buy cheap jewelry when they have a limited amount of money to spend should see the many good and tasteful things we have to offer you. We have been headquarters for jewelry for 45 years in Salt Lake, and with our large stock and small store we are in a position to sell lower than you can buy elsewhere

Ladies' Back Combs

14 k Gold Filled Back Combs, very beautiful designs, plain or set with stones. Sold everywhere $1.50 and $2.00. Our price 75c.

Ladies' Gold Filled Watch

Warranted 20 years, with fine Jeweled movement. Sold everywhere at $16.50. Our price

$11.50

Diamond Rings Very Fine Genuine Stones $25.00, $35.00, $50,00, and upward.

Solid Gold Signet Rings For Ladies and Gentlemen $2.50, $3.50, $5.00

AND UP.

PLATED CLOCKS, $1.75 and $2.50

The Finest Showing of CLOCKS in the city.

Dainty Little GOLD-

High up on Main Street Low down in price. Reliable Jewelers.

It's Time Now to make your early CHRISTMAS SELECTIONS. 'Phone & for the

UTAH DENTAL CO., Logan, Utah

